Gwinn's works of art have been published in various art books and magazines. Helen's works are represented in private, corporate, and museum collections, as well as retail galleries. Her works have been selected into national and international exhibits, including the National Academy of Design Museum in New York City and the Florence Biennale in Florence, Italy. The media of her current expressive images include acrylics, watercolors, collage and found objects on panels and fine papers. She often embellishes her works with gift packets that are folded, tied, painted and incorporated into the composition. She has made recent explorations in clay also. An abbreviated resume, an artist statement, and recent images are located at www.HGWINN.com, which also includes her art blog.

INNOVATIVE WATERMEDIA WITH COLLAGE:

Lives are built layer upon layer: each happening, each decision impacts subsequent events. Watermedia images that develop as layers of paint and collage are deposited by the artist are a rich metaphor for our lives. In this class, facilitated by Helen Gwinn, the students will be led through a process of developing an image by layering paint and collage on watercolor papers. Techniques will be presented, expression of personal imagery will be encouraged and individual attention will be included. Acrylics will be the preferred medium but watercolors may also be used. All levels of experience will be comfortable (and challenged) in this class.
